The Whisper

Some people whisper in my house, my cat whispers too.
I whisper when my Mommy's sleeping
And when my Dad is talking to me.
A whisper is so soft that you can't see it.

It was the fatal blow of humanity which Nature, in one shape or another, stamps ineffacably on all her productions, either to imply that they are temporary and finite perturbation must be wrought by toil and pain. The crimson hand expressed the ineluctible grip in which mortality clutches the highest and purest of earthly mold, degrading them into kindred with the lowest, and even with the very brutes, like whom their visible frames return to dust.

And I thought it best
To pretend I was having an evening rest;
I lay on my tum
And I tried to hum
But nothing particular seemed to come.

On the floor, and that Is all very well for an acrobat;
But it doesn't seem fair
To a Friendly Bear
To stiffen him out with a basket-chair.
And a sort of sqoze
Which grows and grows
Is not too nice for his poor old nose,
And a sort of squch
Is much too much
For his neck and his mouth
And his ears and such."

a sea in neither squall nor calm, loving in monotone the day-gray mist that lightens weakly,

its indifferent carcass.
without the reckless winds,

to rage these dormant features to burn aged-like passions back to youth,

Elm St. Winnetka

Today
There is a great storm
About trash, about pollution

About time.

We have been concerned
Since 1927, about trash, about pollution
So we make very powerful machines

That gobble up all kinds of gunk.

Our machines are called vacuum cleaners
And dirt collectors and floor scrubbers.
We name them storms.

Tornado - Cyclone.

Because they storm into schools
Factories, Hospitals, Offices, Stores
Wherever there is dirt or trash

And they gobble it all up

Which make people happy.
